

Shared decision making workshop

Dave Tomson and Keith Birrell help our learners to grasp the concepts of making shared decisions with patients. We address the issue of who makes the best decisions for patients and how to avoid making poor quality decisions. We use a model that encourages choice, options and the making of shared decisions. We help you to avoid being cornered into making decisions for the patient by making a preemptive strike. We experiment with how to deal with agitated and pushy patients. We signpost the use of shared decision making tools and focus on how to be patient centred.
